A lot of work goes into creating beautiful countertops from nature. The process includes laser measurement artistic vein matching, precision diamond and water-jet cutting, edging and professional installation. One cannot simply call in their order for a custom countertop and have it within a day or two. Quality takes time.

Surface Encounters encourages people to visit a showroom to learn more about natural stone countertops. Besides the selection and fabrication process, another important part of customer care is making sure one knows how to care for their granite countertop to keep it looking new for years to come.
